Mission Honduras

Showing, Teaching, and Releasing God's Love

The Sun Sat on 2008

As I think of the sunset New Year's Eve 2008, I think of all that has happened this last year. So many preparations came to fruition; being settled in Honduras and getting started in ministry helping Henry (my brother) and Mercy International.

We had a baptism in the mountains for 24 people who came to know the Lord. Four couples of which have now realized that living together without marriage is sin and we will have a group wedding in February.

We saw eleven of the Hope and a Future (H&F) Students Graduate from High School (above), and now they are looking towards University and beginning new jobs.

We saw two Honduran missionaries become established by Mercy International, to reach farther into the mountains, whom I helped with the baptism.

We saw God use people to fund a truck for us. Praise God! Now we do not have to walk in the rain. We can take supplies and people where they need to go.

In addition, several local students graduating from sixth grade asked us to include them in the scholarship program, without which they will not be able to continue their education because their families are too poor to pay for school. I had the honor of speaking at some of the graduations.

Mission Honduras

Showing, Teaching, and Releasing God's Love

We have an open door to give nutrition classes and nursing classes in the Hospital. The nurses love to see Melissa.

We had services in the Invasion on Saturday nights. For Christmas, we showed the Nativity Story movie and for New Years we showed the tip of the spear (a movie about missionaries.)

The H&F students helped prepare and plant the garden at the Hospital. Now the garden is planted and waiting for the rains to come water it.

We received another container for the hospital. We hope to have one a year.

The year also came with some sadness that was inevitable, seeing our daughter stay in the states to attend school. She is doing well and is staying with family in Arkansas.

We are doing well, staying in Honduras for the Holidays. The kids love to have us here and we are learning much Spanish.

We received the first shipment of Vita Meal from Feed the Children and some shirts and shoes with the help of a church in Kansas City. Our desire is to start a feeding center with the help and guidance of Mercy International.

We saw a set of twins and two other babies come to this world with one more on the way.

Now, with the sunset complete, we look towards a new year. A dawning of a new time of opportunities. Pray for 2009 and see what God does in Honduras this year.

God Bless you all!
